Mr. R., from the same committee, reported back the bill from the lower board making an appropriation for a corrected book of plats, and asked that it be laid on the table; which was agreed to.

Mr. R. then asked leave to make a personal explanation. During his absence from the city an article had appeared in one of the city papers, alluding to some remarks which he had made in the board in reference to marks which he had made in the board in reference to the inspection of gas meters, as being said in the char-acter of an officer of the Gas Company, and which, if suffered to go uncontradicted, would have a tendency to injure the company. Had it only affected himself per-sonally, he would not take up the time in making any remarks on the subject. This anonymous article, which was signed "D.," had totally misrepresented what he really said in the discussion alluded to. The writer had quoted him as saying that the meters now in use in this city were incorrect and unreliable; whereas what he did say was that the meter in use here was the best and only city were incorrect and unreliable; whereas what he did say was that the meter in use here was the best and only reliable one that could be found. He would admit that it was liable to some variations, owing to a change in the water-line; but these could not exceed two per cent. against the consumer, while they would admit of a much larger per centage against the company. The variations, on an average, were in favor of the consumer; and with this single exception these meters were per and, with this single exception, these meters were per

A communication was also received from the Mayor aclosing the fourteenth annual report of the trustees of the public schools. The Mayor says that it will be found to contain much valuable information; and, in his judg-ment, entitled the board to the thanks of the community. The citizens could not fail to appreciate and ap-prove of the unceasing efforts of those gentlemen, rendered often at great personal inconvenience and without pecuniary compensation or reward. The teachers had been attentive in the discharge of their duties, and the treasurer and secretary had performed their respective duties in the most satisfactory manner. His attention had been directed to the establishment of a high school, and he suggested that the engine house recently turned over to the corporation by the Northern Liberties Fire Company be selected for that purpose. RESPECT TO THE MEMORY OF MR. DAYTON. The gentlemen connected with the office of the Fourth Auditor of the Treasury met yesterday at the Auditor's room, when A. J. O'Bannon, esq., being called to preside, and the object of the meeting having been sta on motion of D. Higgins, esq., the following resolutions were adopted :

Resolved, That the intelligence of the sudden and unexpected demise of Aaron Ogden Dayton, esq., late Fourth Auditor of the Treasury, has penetrated our hearts with grief and thrown around us a cloud of sadness and gloom that will not soon be removed. We feel that we have that will not soon be removed. We feel that we have been bereaved not only of an official superior, but that in him we have lost a friend, who, by his uniform kindness, courtesy, and gentleness, had bound to himself, by strong attachment, all with whom he held official connexion. The government, also, has lost an officer of sterling integrity and distinguished intelligence, and one whose minute and thorough acquaintance with all the details of his official duty afforded him the ability to perform with great facility to himself and to the satisfaction of all concerned the responsible and often very difficult duties of his station. But the consideration that most affords consolation to his friends under their bereavement, and which softens the poignancy of their grief, is ment, and which softens the poignancy of their grief, is the fact that their departed friend had for a long period past, and to the day of his death, both by his open pro-fession and by the purity and consistent moral excellence of his life and actions, set forth and illustrated the character of a Christian gentleman. To his bereaved widow and family his loss is irreparable, and to them we beg to connected in his own county. THE STRIKE AT THE CAPITOL .- The letter of Capt. M. C. Meigs, superintendent of the U. S. Capitol extension, in answer to the demand for an increase of wages, was read to the plasterers on Friday afternoon last. On Friday night the plasterers met at the Model House, and appointed a committee to draught a reply. The following reply was submitted to a meeting on Saturday night and

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 4, 1858. DEAR SIR: We had the honor of hearing read (by Mr. Jones) your answer to a requisition of the plasterers lately employed on the Capitol extension, asking for an advance of wages from two dollars to two and a half dollars per day. If Mr. Jones had given us possession of your reply it would have enabled us to give it a more correct consid-eration. As it is, we can only reply to those parts that our memory can furnish us with for an answer. In our requisition we carefully avoided the statement of any grievance, and confined ourselves simply to asking for an advance of wages, and from the tenor of your reply we concluded that you were not aware of the fact, viz: That two men working as plasterers, and having no legitimate claim to the trade, have been receiving two and a half dollars per day for the last twelve mouths, or thereabouts. Surely, sir, this bears on the face of it an act of great injustice to the plasterers, or an act of great partiality to he said two men that are learning the trade.

We might say, further, that in nineteen cases out of twenty the building trades would have struck against the men, but we wish it to be distinctly understood that

There is another inacter to which we would draw your attention, viz: When the advertisement appeared in the New York papers for plasterers to work on the Capitol New York papers for planterers to work on the Capitol extension, not more than three wrote and were engaged; and from the advertisement, the three men came away under the impression that their expenses would be paid, as nothing to the contrary was stated, such being the usages of the trade for an indefinite period, unless stated to the contrary in letter or advertisement. In other cases Mr. Long subspires men already and trade cases, Mr. Jones authorizes men already at work on the Capitol to write to Philadelphia for men, the mention of expenses being carefully avoided. The men come, exar. action, from the committee on ponce, reported back a bill appropriating $212 to make certain repairs at the Western Market House; and it was taken up and passed.

and flesh of another. All we ask is equal rights and impartial treatment.

Again, sir, we think you intimated that Mr. Jones could get one hundred or one thousand hands to supply our places. We are not aware of any obstacle in the way of Mr. Jones's doing so; but we would suggest that Mr. Jones be candid enough to tell the men previous to engagement that there is a strike on the Capitol extension. By doing so it might prevent a great amount of pecuniary loss and grievous disappointment to those who might be drawn into the vortex of delusion and misrepresentation; and in all probability the government might be led into an expense for which they would have no equivalent, in addition to forty per cent. In loss of labor, and thirty per cent. of inferior work for the first month on any new hands that Mr. Jones might engage from any part of the Union. om any part of the Union.

from any part of the Union.

We are aware, sir, of the high and responsible situation you hold under your government, and of the able and efficient staff of engineers, clerks, etc., and presuming you not to be a contractor, you would be at no pecuniary loss by making our wages equal to the others. Our wages generally do not average more throughout the trade than the wages of a laborer in steady employ; therefore we have a right to combine to ask an advance when we see a favorable chance.

RAILBOAD ACCIDENT.—The railroad train from Phila delphia, which was due at Baltimore at three o'clock yesterday morning, was defained till six, in consequence of running over a horse at Perryville, about thirty-six miles from Baltimore. The baggage car was thrown from the track, and Mr. Peter McGirk, baggage master, killed. Another, named Reuben Jamar, was severely hurt. The passengers escaped uninjured. The reporter of the Associated Press is indebted to C. J. Gibbons, esq., mail agent, who was in the mail car when the disaster occurred, for the following additional particulars: The train approaching the 'usquehanna, the locomotive was switched off the main track, while the rest proceeded down the grade. The mail car struck a horse and was thrown down an embankment of a few feet, turning end for end in its transit. Mr. Reuben Jamar, one of the oldest conductors on the road, but not in charge of the train at the time. was severely but not dangerously injured; Mr. McDuffie, the through baggage master, was cut on the head and arm, but not seriously; but Mr. Peter McGirk, the baggage agent of the Philadelphia and Baltimore road, was nstantly killed. It is supposed that when he found the car was rolling over, he jumped from the platform where he was standing. He leaves a wife and one child. The passenger cars, which were detached from the mail car, passed the latter without coming in collision.

Comers.—The comet par excellence will this evening be very near Arcturus, and will continue to move towards the star Beta Scorpii. It will soon diminish in brilliancy, and in the course of a fortnight will disappear to bservers in this latitude, although it may doubtless be seen in the southern hemisphere for some time longer. It is now a very brilliant object.

Tuttle's comet is easily found with a telescope of a low power, but it is moving very rapidly. It is now near Andromeda, and is moving about four degrees west and one and a half degree south per day. Its motion is ret-

Encke's comet is now a few degrees west of Regulus, and is moving towards the southeast. It is exceedingly faint, and only to be seen through a telescope.

THE WASHINGTON THEATER. - Miss Maggie Mitchell was welcomed last night with a very fair house, and with the greatest enthusiasm. The many triumphs which she had gained in different parts of the Union enlarged the expectations of her friends and admirers, but they were fully ealized. She never appeared more charming than when she made the Count Beausoliel happy after tormenting him into reformation, unless it were when, after playing the "Maid with the Milking Pail" to perfection, she bestowed her hand upon Algernon. We predict for her in-creased triumphs during the remaining nights of her engagement. To-night she will appear in the new drama of the "Young Prince," and in the comedy of "Katy O'Shiel."

SUICIDE.-Mr. R. W. Bushnell committed suicide at he American Hotel, in Staunton, (says the Richmond Whig.) on Friday evening by shooting himself in the head. He was originally from Rockingham county, Virginia, but more recently lived in this city, acting in the capacity of a teacher, which he filled with ability. He was a graduate of the University of Virginia, and well /TOO DIPLOMATS AND TOURISTS.-The adversigned for the rash act, except a supposed derangement.

AMUSEMENTS .- Last night the Metropolitan Eagle As sembly and the Hibernia Club had cotillion parties, and we have no doubt they had a gay time. Meigs, announce a grand ball for next Monday evening at the Assembly

THE GERMAN YAGERS, under command of Capt. Schwarzman, were on parade yesterday, and had a picnic at the Park. We learn that they enjoyed themselves finely.

THE WATER QUESTION.

To the Editors of the Union : Your correspondent "S." seems disposed to take time by the forelock in tapping the government water-pipes. Perhaps if he undertakes the task he may find himself amenable both to municipal and statute law, for he ought to know that stringent enactments have been made both by Congress and the city authorities against opening the streets for any purpose without authority previously ob-tained. It will not do to argue that because the original appropriation looked to supplying the city with an abundance of pure water, therefore it was to be without money and without price. Such, at any rate, was not the opinion of Capt. Moigs, the able superintendent of the work, for, in his report to the government submitting the plan, he remarks, after speaking of the immense impetus given to a city by the construction of a proper system of water. to a city by the construction of a proper system of water works, the "diministed rates of insurance, the increased comfort of living, cause a rise in the value of property, and a demand for houses and lots, which more than comand a demand for houses and loss, which more than com-pensate the inhabitants for any increased taxation. Thus it would be in Washington." This extract shows con-clusively that, in the opinion of the engineer who plan-ned the work, the inhabitants who enjoyed the use of the the men, but we wish it to be distinctly understood that such is not our intention, neither do we wish to better our condition at the cost or injury of others, directly or indirectly; but all of us firmly believe that the government is both able and willing to pay us two dollars and a half a day as readily as it has been paid to these two mon. Sir, you allude to men combining with a view of forcing an officer of the government to give or grant an advance of wages. We beg leave to say that we have exercised that right, and in a lawful manner. It is the only sceptre we can wield in the justification of our rights, as citizens of the great Republic. We have combined to protect, not to injure. You confess we have a right to sell our labor to the best market. We have offered it at a price in the most respectful manner we knew how.

There is another matter to which we would draw your attention, viz: When the advertisement appeared in the such or the control of the engineer who planned the work, the inhabitants who enjoyed the use of the water were to be taxed for it. The same idea prevails in all his public communications on the subject, but partic. Unlarly so in his report upon the Washington Aqueduct, made in answer to a resolution of the House of Representatives of April 7, 1856. After speaking of the main pipes proposed to be laid to the principal public departments and localities, he adds: "They are all that proposed will be laid by the United States. For the distribution throughout the city, smaller pipes connexions, and use the water for distribution through our principal public departments and localities, he adds: "They are all that proposed will be laid by the United States. For the distribution through our principal public departments and localities, he adds: "They are all that proposed will be laid by the United States. For the distribution through our principal public departments and localities, he adds: "They are all that proposed will be laid by the United States. For the distribution through our princi steam-engines, &c. A water-rent, to be charged by the city for every house into which the water is introduced, city for every nouse into which the water is introduced, will defray the expense of this distribution."

I have italicised the words "authorized by Congress" because it does not seem to have entered into the calculations of "S.," and in this he is followed by many others, who have not given attention to the subject. Without such authority in some form our citizens cannot partake of the blessing which is soon to flow at our doors. Without such authority in some form our citizens cannot partake of the blessing which is soon to flow at our doors. As well might the doctrine of squatter sovereignty be carried to the point of settling down upon the public res-crvations set apart for the comfort and convenience of the inhabitants. The argument is as good in one case as in
